

The lease between availability group and the Windows Server Failover Cluster has expired. A connectivity issue occurred between the instance of SQL Server and the Windows Server Failover Cluster. To determine whether the availability group is failing over correctly, check the corresponding availability group resource in the Windows Server Failover Cluster.

216	2025-09-07 20:02:07.980	Server	SQL Server hosting availability group [REDACTED] did not receive a process event signal from the Windows Server Failover Cluster within the lease timeout period.
217	2025-09-07 20:02:14.760	Server	The lease between availability group [REDACTED] and the Windows Server Failover Cluster has expired. A connectivity issue occurred between the instance of SQL Server and the Windows Server Failover Cluster. To dete
218	2025-09-07 20:02:14.760	Server	Always On: The local replica of availability group [REDACTED] is going offline because either the lease expired or lease renewal failed. This is an informational message only. No user action is required.
219	2025-09-07 20:02:14.760	Server	The state of the local availability replica in availability group [REDACTED] has changed from 'PRIMARY_NORMAL' to 'RESOLVING_NORMAL'. The state changed because the lease between the local availability replica a
220	2025-09-07 20:03:51.160	Server	The lease worker of availability group [REDACTED] is now sleeping the excess lease time (161203 ms) supplied during online. This is an informational message only. No user action is required.