We'll take a deep dive into what's new in Outlook 866 396 3403.com later in this article, but first let's clear up some of the confusion surrounding this service. Here's a quick summary of what you need to know:

Outlook 866 396 3403.com is the current name for Microsoft's email service, which was formerly known as Hotmail (and later, as Windows Live Hotmail).

Outlook 866 396 3403 Mail is the web app that lets you browse your Outlook 866 396 3403.com email account. It's part of the Outlook 866 396 3403 on the web suite of web apps. Outlook 866 396 3403 Mail is the front end while Outlook 866 396 3403.com is the back end.

When Hotmail was rebranded as Outlook 866 396 3403.com, existing Hotmail users were allowed to keep their @hotmail.com email addresses but new users could no longer create email accounts with that domain. Instead, new users could only create @Outlook 866 396 3403.com addresses, even though both domains used the same email service.

Outlook 866 396 3403 (or Office Outlook 866 396 3403) is the Microsoft desktop email client. It can be used with Outlook 866 396 3403.com email addresses or with any other email addresses.

Everything else—including Outlook 866 396 3403 Express, MSN Mail, and Windows Live Mail—is no longer relevant unless you're using outdated versions of Windows.

However, be aware of the Windows Mail app, one-half of an email-and-calendar offering that's bundled with a fresh install of Windows 10 (the other half being Calendar). This is a lightweight app designed to handle multiple accounts and fairly moderate email use.
